As Kansas City's premier supplier of office equipment, including copiers, digital imaging products, multi-functional printers and other machines to keep small businesses running smoothly, Power On Technologies takes its commitment to the community seriously. Support of various organizations in Lee's Summit — organization's culture, and is led by Lee's Summit residents and Power On owners Patrick and Shelly Searcy.

Power On encourages its associates to give back to the community by donating a precious commodity. Their time. Volunteer time is the most powerful element driving non-profit organizations. Without this type of donation, most non-profits could not achieve their missions. Encouraging each Power On associate to volunteer for what is important to them as individuals, helps keep their passion alive. Power On also organizes company sponsored opportunities to give back. For example, Power On has averaged 95% participation of the entire company every eight weeks over the last year to the Community Blood Center.

Associates of Power On give freely of their time at recycling events, social events for the community, boy scouts, and are active in their local schools and religious organizations. Power On also contributes financially to the non-profit community. Power On has donated copiers, printers, and fax machines to organizations that simply cannot sacrifice their program budgets for operational needs. The benefits these organizations bring to our community are far too important to forego. Therefore, Power On makes these contributions in an effort to leave a lasting legacy for our children and those in need of these valuable services.

During the last year, Power On employees donated 960 hours for the benefit of others. If that wasn't enough, as an organization Power On financially contributed $80,000 —which is 5% of its total sales. Power On: accentuating the power of one.

Recently honored as a top 25 Under 25 employer in Kansas City by the Small Business Monthly, Power On prides itself on community involvement. Fostering a culture that encourages employees to give their time to numerous philanthropic activities and organizations in Lee's Summit and throughout the Kansas City Metro area makes Power On one of Lee's Summit's leading businesses of character.
